Equatorial Guinea visa guide for Bangladeshi passport holders

How to apply: Online e-visa letter or embassy visa · Last checked: 6 November 2026 · Online version: https://travelcsbd.com/visa/equatorial-guinea/

UK government (FCDO) advice says visitors need a visa, which can be applied for through an online form with uploaded documents; processing takes 72 hours, and you print the e-visa letter to show on arrival, when border officials issue the visa. You can also apply in person at an embassy. Short-term visas are valid for 90 days, passport must be valid at least 6 months after arrival, and a yellow fever certificate is required. We could not open the official portal, so the exact portal address, fee and Bangladesh specifics are marked for confirmation. Last checked 6 November 2026.

How to apply

- UK advice describes an online application with document upload and a 72-hour processing time. You print the e-visa letter and show it on arrival; border officials then issue the visa. Applying in person at an embassy before travel is also possible. Insist that the officer issues the visa and stamps your passport, because UK advice notes travellers were delayed or threatened with detention when this was not done properly.
- We could not open the official portal or a mission page covering Bangladesh. Several unofficial sites charge extra fees; contact our office before paying anyone.

Total cost

- Government fee: not confirmed from an official page. Travel Counsellor Ltd. service charges, if any, are quoted separately in BDT by our office.
